

ZACHARY TAYLOR HOUSE

5608 Apache Road, Louisville

“Springfield,” a two-story brick house built by Zachary Taylor’s father, served as the future president’s boyhood home from ca. 1790 to 1808. Taylor was married here in 1810, returned often during his military career, visited before his short term as the 12th president of the United States began in 1849, and was brought back to the family cemetery for burial in 1850. The house, near the Zachary Taylor National Cemetery, is privately owned.